I was invited to speak at 5 events here in D.C. during national "infrastructure week."

The Council of Institutional Investors, a nonprofit trade association of pension funds, etc., paid for my travel since the City does not have budget to fund my participation at events like this. To the best of my knowledge and after checking around, CII has no business interests with the City nor do they receive any funding from the City.

Let the record show that when I arrived at my hotel, the D.C. Hilton where the conference is being held, I was upgraded to a suite. I did not ask for it but they were sold out and I think I was the lucky contestant in the reception line.

I paid for my own meals and enjoyed a lovely glass of wine too. Acacia chardonnay here at the hotel.
